So that's where we come in. In March 2010, The Pokédex - Extended Fanon Edition was founded. Since then, we have been busy in our little corner of the Video Games forum creating pages filled with unofficial fluff to more fully flesh out the creatures, the places, and other fixtures of the world of Pokémon.. Here's what we've got so far:

In mathematics, trigonometric identities are equalities that involve trigonometric functions and are true for every value of the occurring variables where both sides of the equality are defined. Geometrically, these are identities involving certain functions of one or more angles. They are distinct from triangle identities, which are identities potentially involving angles but also involving ...

I've been evaluating the various Common Lisp testing frameworks. I have a large body of code in my Project Euler stuff, and I use unit testing extensively; extensively enough that the simplistic unit testing package I had been using was getting unwieldy. So I figured I'd take a look at what was available and see how everything stacked up.

We're very grateful to Frank La Fontaine from Australia who got in touch and explained the method he'd learnt at school 60 years ago! Of course the great thing about maths is that Frank's method will still work perfectly today. Here is his explanation in his own words - we've presented it here exactly as he sent it to us because we can't see how we'd make it any better!
