I've survived 7 months living in the van, discovering one darkened car park after another. I imagine the day I'll be parking on a beach, looking out to sea, waxing my board in some romantic Pintagram vision of what teaching could allow life to be; leaving at 3.30pm to hit the surf and float away upon a sea of dreams, the occasional wave below my feet.

I don't agree with you dennis. One of the most important things is having patience. When you think of your childhood perhaps you can understand them better. There are always students in the classrooms like the ones who has got no discipline or maturity. It is really easy to teach in the classes without those. That's the difference of yours about how to manage a class with those.
