A trivial event handler. Because the code for checking for events and the main loop are common amongst applications, many programming frameworks take care of their implementation and expect the user to provide only the code for the event handlers. In this simple example there may be a call to an event handler called OnKeyEnter() that includes an argument with a string of characters ...

The biases and weights in the Network object are all initialized randomly, using the Numpy `np.random.randn` function to generate Gaussian distributions with mean $0$ and standard deviation $1$. This random initialization gives our stochastic gradient descent algorithm a place to start from. In later chapters we'll find better ways of initializing the weights and biases, but this will do for now.
