The phosphorus cycle is the biogeochemical cycle that describes the movement of phosphorus through the lithosphere, hydrosphere, and biosphere. Unlike many other biogeochemical cycles, the atmosphere does not play a significant role in the movement of phosphorus, because phosphorus and phosphorus-based compounds are usually solids at the typical ranges of temperature and pressure found on Earth.

3. Virtually all commercial production of H₂O₂ now utilizes a process based on the auto-oxidation of anthraquinones. The degradation by-products of this reaction are typically acidic and, depending on subsequent purification steps, will typically result in a more acidic product than suggested in the above table (by 2-4 pH units), and add significantly to the acidity of the product.
